

more than 20 percent of their GDP by 2020 because of AIDS.

The U.N. report said unsafe sex was on the rise in high-income countries such as the United States and some European nations, subsequently triggering a rise in sexually transmitted diseases, including HIV.

"All the emphasis is put on treatment, which has had a major impact, but prevention has been neglected and education has been neglected," Piot said. "The price that we will have to pay for that neglect is very high."

The report found a bright spot in Cambodia, where prevention measures have had a significant impact, but officials also warned about the deteriorating situation in China and in the Caribbean, which continues to be the second most affected region in the world.

Last June, the U.N. General Assembly held a special session on HIV/AIDS, winning pledges from governments to pursue new preventive actions and contribute more funds to the fight. The United Nations estimates that some $10 billion will be needed every year to fight AIDS in low and middle-income countries.

□ 1645

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. JEFF MILLER of Florida). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. GANSKE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GANSKE addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. KAPTUR addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

JUMPERTOWN QUILT PROJECT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. WICKER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WICKER. Mr. Speaker, ever since the events of September 11, people in communities large and small have looked for ways to show their support for the victims of terrorism and to express the pride they have in this great country.

I rise today to share the story of an inspiring, patriotic project undertaken in a community in Mississippi's First Congressional District. The students and residents of Jumpertown, in Prentiss County, Mississippi, chose a unique way to share their words of support and patriotism by including them in a quilt. I was honored to be asked to deliver it to President Bush.

Mrs. Nancy Johnson, a teacher at the school, conceived the idea, which quickly became more than a school project. It was enthusiastically embraced by the entire community.

Mrs. Betty Sue Geno started the process by cutting cloth squares, which were then distributed to each class, kindergarten through 12th grade, in the 365-member student body at Jumpertown School. The office staff and lunchroom ladies also participated. Each group was given the opportunity to create and decorate the individual squares.

When all pieces were completed, Mrs. Penny Padgett designed and sewed the quilt top. Then the squares were turned over to a group of ladies in the community who met at the Barksdale Parents Center for an old-fashioned quilting bee.

The ladies who put it all together were Mrs. Ruby Smart, Mrs. Sue Nell Searcy, Mrs. Mary Odle, and Mrs. Louise Robinson. They were assisted by teachers and staff members from Jumpertown School, including Lisa Cousar, Eleshia Jumper, and Martha Mitchell.

Mr. Speaker, I was proud to be part of a patriotic ceremony on November 12, the day after Veterans Day, to present the quilt officially. The entire school assembled in the gymnasium, along with many people from the community, to pay tribute to Prentiss County veterans and to celebrate this very special project.

Prentiss County superintendent of education Judy Perrigo and Jumpertown principal Kenneth Chisholm took part in the program. It included patriotic musical selections from students Kayla Robinson and Megan Downs and teacher Norma Jo Jones. Sixth-grader Channing Durham also read a poem he had written.

In her remarks, Mrs. Johnson said, "Much as our Nation has come together, our community has pulled together on this quilt. We are sending this to the President with the hope that he knows that in Jumpertown our prayers, our thoughts, and our support are with him and the country."

This project in Jumpertown, Mississippi, Mr. Speaker, is a reflection of the American spirit which has sustained our Nation during these difficult times. I proudly accepted this quilt on behalf of the entire United States Congress, and I look forward to taking it to President Bush at the White House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from the District of Columbia is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Ms. NORTON addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. SMITH of Michigan addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. PALLONE addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

BORDER POINTS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday evening after returning from a day and a half visit with the Canadian parliamentarians and government leaders in Ottawa, I spoke briefly about the importance of our mutual trade and our mutual concerns about terrorism.

It is important when we are discussing antiterrorism efforts on our north and south borders that we not forget the importance of trade. The trade crossing just the Ambassador Bridge between Windsor, Ontario, and Detroit, Michigan, equals all U.S.-Japan trade.

That said, Americans as well as Canadians and Mexicans are concerned about the movement of terrorists and other illegal activity along our borders. It is not just about terrorists and possible terrorists. Most Americans have been aware of the narcotics problems along the U.S.-Mexican border over the last decade. Andean cocaine and heroin move into the U.S. through Mexico and the Caribbean Sea. The northern border does not have the fences and patrols that we have along the south border.

Now, as drug patterns change in the United States, Canada has become a major narcotics conduit to the United States, as well: Ecstasy, coming mostly from the Netherlands, across into the U.S. from Canada; ephedrine and chemical precursors for methamphetamines, meth, for Ecstasy and other synthetic drugs are moving through Canada. These are in fact our fastest growing drug problems.

Furthermore, potent marijuana from British Columbia, called B.C. Bud, and from Quebec, called Quebec Gold, have potencies similar to cocaine. In fact, Quebec Gold sells for about the same price as cocaine in New York City. But it is important for Americans to understand two basic points: one, it is our consumption that has resulted in our hemispheric neighbors turning into transit and drug-producing nations; and, B, in the case of Canada, the drug-trafficking, like the movement of terrorists, goes both ways.

This does not change the need for border control. The borders are often our best chance to catch drug traffickers and terrorists before they lose themselves within our free nations; thus, we have to work on border control.